

Dreams of New York

Have you ever dreamed about visiting place so iconic, you can imagine every big street or dark alley, place so well represented in a culture that it's almost impossible to imagine world without it? Well... Half a year ago, corporate gave me a secondment proposal. It was like dream becoming true.

I arrived in New York without troubles. Everything was arranged smoothly. I had myself picked up by local representatives and headed to my new apartment on the outskirts of the city. Neighborhood seemed to me very lovely. First night I couldn't believe where I am.

Next day I was introduced to the team and office in downtown – yes, the view is like you would imagine it. Everyone on the team was very open and eager to help, even to the point where I started to develop anxiety. I couldn't get used to amount of much attention I got.

After brief overview of the building and line-up of short meetings, we took out to the city center for a lunch and I must tell you, I almost lost it, being on Broadway. It was quite different from my usual lunch, for sure.

First week went by having me introduced to procedures New York branch have and overall getting me ready to catch up with the team. I must say, there was a lot to be learned. I thought to myself that there is now way I will be able to keep up like that. Fortunately, after month everything just clicked with me. Now, I just can't wait to share this experience with guys in London.

Sadly, my time here is coming to an end. I can't believe that two months just passed by. I started to develop a bound with this place. You can escape from New York but New York will never escape from you.
